Sold £6,900

1 bottle Hennessy Fine Champagne Cognac Vintage 1830, this unique bottle has been bottled in the early 1940's probably under the direction of The German Third Reich as a part of its need to raise capital. The 1830 Vintage at Hennessy has been only used generally as part of blends and very rarely indeed as a single vintage. It is likely that Hennessy, against their own wish, has been directed by the Third Reich to bottle old Vintage Reserve cognacs as single Vintage. We include some of the detail of provenance provided by the Vendor"

"This is the oldest Hennessy vintage cognac known - there is no second bottle and no older vintage. Of course, Hennessy has also older vintages still on stock bottled in glass "dame-jeannes", but these will only be used for "assemblages".
